A little room to read.

Meet Leaf. A quiet home for your PDFs.

Good reading starts with a little space. Space around the page. Space between ideas. Space to follow a thought all the way to its end.

Leaf keeps the essentials close: a clear page, comfortable sizing, simple navigation, and a few useful ways to leave your mark.

START HERE

Press the right arrow to turn the page.

One page.
Then the next.

Move at the pace of your reading. Use the arrow buttons in the toolbar, press the left and right arrow keys, or enter a page number to go directly there.

A QUICKER WAY IN

Open the sidebar for page thumbnails and the document outline. Use search to find a word or a passage.

Find your comfortable view.

The right view makes the page feel effortless. Match the PDF to your window, then adjust until the type feels right.

01 Fit page

See the whole page at once. A helpful view for a slide, a diagram, or a quick overview.

02 Fit width

Let the page fill the available horizontal space. Read larger type and scroll down naturally.

03 Fit height

Let the page fill the available vertical space. Keep the top and bottom in view as you turn pages.

YOUR READING RHYTHM

Choose continuous scrolling for a flowing document, or single-page mode for a more focused view.

Keep the thought.

Some sentences deserve a second reading. Select text and highlight it. Add a note for the thought that comes next. Rotate a page if it arrives sideways.

TRY A HIGHLIGHT

Attention is the beginning of understanding.

A small mark can be a way back to a big idea.

Select a sentence above, then choose Highlight. This is real, selectable PDF text, so you can also copy it or search for a phrase.

LEAVE YOURSELF A NOTE

What would you like to remember from your next read?

Save your changes to keep your annotations. Save As makes a separate copy. Leaf edits annotations and pages; it does not reflow the original document's text.

A moment of reading.

A SHORT PASSAGE TO TRY YOUR NEW VIEW

The reading room was quiet before the rain began. Along the windows, the late afternoon light settled on the tables, and the shadows of the trees moved almost too slowly to notice.

There was no hurry to finish. A book lay open, a cup stood nearby, and the day had become small enough to fit inside the margins of a page. Beyond the glass, people passed with their collars raised. Inside, a sentence waited patiently to be read again.

Sometimes clarity arrives this way: not as a flash, but as enough room to look carefully. One line follows another. An idea takes shape. Something that seemed difficult becomes a little easier to see.

Make yourself comfortable.

The rest of the page is yours.
